This is the recorded information from the on-car transponders during the 1995 Indy 500. The numbers begin as the cars are in the south chute, between turns 1 and 2. Yellow is on, pace car lights are on. The pace car will turn off it's lights on the backstretch when directed by race control.

Antenna location	Pace Car	Scott Goodyear	Jacques Villeneuve	Distance between antennas
South Chute	65	65	65	5/16 mile
T2 exit b	66	65	65	5/16 mile
End of Backstraigh	77	68	66	10/16 mile	PC lights off
T3 entry speed trap	83	117	118	175 feet
North Chute	88	166	164	5/16 mile
T4 exit	98	193	142	5/16 mile
Pit Entry	117	202	158	3/16 mile

(antenna also on the track)

Speeds are average between the measuring antennas in MPH.

The pace car averaged 117 MPH between the turn 4 exit and the pit entry, and was probably at 125+ MPH at pit entry. Goodyear nailed it hard just prior to the entry to turn 3 trying to jump JV and overdid it badly. JV saw what was happening and backed off a bit. Steve Horne was wrong on TV but later admitted that he was wrong, USAC was right and the penalty was right. Scott Goodyear gives up hard...

The pace car was driven during the race by Don Bailey, an IMS employee, former racer and driver of the pace car for 10 years prior to the 1995 race.
